About Chiropractic

The modern Doctor of Chiropractic works both directly and indirectly with the body's nerves because every function of your entire body is under the control of the nerve system. Every organ, tissue, and cell is controlled by nerve impulses traveling from the brain to each part of the body.

Nerves make possible all movement. Nerves transmit all sensations to the brain. Nerves make possible all sight, smell, taste, touch, and hearing. Nerves maintain your balance and keep your body temperature at 98.6 degrees. Nerves make it possible to swallow. Nerves make your bowels move. Nerves control your liver, lungs, spleen, pancreas, gall bladder, and kidney. In fact, the nerve system is the master system which controls all the body's many systems and functions.

Complete, perfect, natural health comes only when you have a complete, perfect, natural, normally functioning nerve system. The present-day Doctor of Chiropractic has had six or more years of college education, has been fully licensed after rigid examinations, and has had extensive clinical experience with the nerve system and how to care for it without drugs or surgery.

Every science of healing has what is known as an "avenue of approach". For example, in the field of medicine, a hypodermic needle injects drugs through the skin, a pill is swallowed and goes into the stomach. They are the "avenues" through which the drugs gain access to the body.

For the Doctor of Chiropractic, the "avenue of approach" is primarily the SPINE because it houses and protects the spinal cord, the "switchboard" of the nerve system, through which nerves pass from the brain to different parts of the body. The nerves leave the spinal bones called vertebrae. When these vertebrae move out of alignment there may be interference with the normal activity of the nerves. The interference can disturb function throughout the body and cause many illnesses.

Most conditions of ill health are the result of some underlying cause within the body which must be found first before correction can be effected, pain relieved, and health restored and maintained. Chiropractic has developed special techniques for locating and correcting spinal misalignments in the organs, tissues, and cells of the body.

We can assist you, your family and your friends to achieve real results using natural, drug free treatments. Call us today to schedule your chiropractic appointment!
